Legends of Irish Hockey

Harry Cahill is regarded by many to be the greatest Irish hockey goalkeeper of all time. A glittering international career, spanning twenty years, earned him 72 Irish caps and a truly legendary standing in Irish hockey. Cahill played in three Olympic Games with Great Britain (Rome 1960, Tokyo 1964 and Mexico 1968) and in the first European Nations Cup in Brussels in 1970 for Ireland. An immensely popular figure, Cahill possessed tremendous reflexes, anticipation, athleticism and bravery that made him a formidable opponent for any opposing striker to beat.
